01 Who You're Meeting

Marc Benioff — Chair & Chief Executive Officer, Salesforce.

In role: Co-founded Salesforce in 1999 and has led it since

Today: Sets Salesforce's strategy, currently the repositioning of the entire company around Agentforce and the shift from seat-based licensing toward measuring and pricing work delivered.

He founded Salesforce in 1999 after thirteen years at Oracle, where he began his career, and built the company on the argument that enterprise software should be delivered as a service rather than installed. He has run it for more than a quarter of a century through successive platform shifts — cloud, mobile, social, and now agents — and has grown it by acquisition as much as organically, including Tableau, MuleSoft, Slack and, in November 2025, Informatica.

Career: Co-Founder, Chair & Chief Executive Officer, Salesforce; Sales, marketing and product roles over thirteen years, Oracle

The company: Agentforce ARR reached $800M in FY2026, up 169%, and passed $1.2B by Q1 FY2027 — up 205%. Combined Agentforce and Data 360 ARR exceeds $2.9B. Salesforce has started reporting Agentic Work Units, a measure of tasks completed rather than licences sold.

What they sell: The CRM suite — Sales, Service, Marketing and industry clouds — plus Data 360 (formerly Data Cloud), Tableau, Slack, MuleSoft and Informatica, all under Agentforce 360 as the agentic layer. Informatica was acquired in November 2025.

02 Where The Company Sits

The metric to pay attention to is Agentic Work Units — 2.4 billion delivered to date, growing 57% quarter over quarter, defined as moments where AI did work rather than just reasoned about it. Whatever you think of the framing, it is the first serious attempt by a major vendor to price and report AI on output rather than seats, and it is the direction SAP has also signalled. For a portfolio programme that matters because seat-based AI budgeting breaks down quickly.

03 Talking Points

- Thirteen years at Oracle before founding Salesforce — he knows exactly how the incumbent he displaced sells.
- Agentic Work Units are his framing and his risk. Pushing for outcome-linked commercial terms is pushing on an open door.
- Over 60% of agentic bookings come from existing-customer expansion. If a PortCo already runs Salesforce, you are negotiating an upsell, not a selection.

What to pressure-test about the company:

- Total revenue growth of 10% is modest for a company positioning itself at the centre of an AI transformation
- Q1 FY2027 backlog fell short of expectations and full-year guidance slightly missed — the agentic numbers are not yet moving the aggregate
- Agentforce and Data 360's $2.9B combined ARR includes $1.1B from the acquired Informatica business, so organic agentic ARR is smaller than the headline

04 GIP Context

GIP: No publicly disclosed GIP relationship. Salesforce is likely present at PortCos with significant customer-facing operations. Note that Informatica — now a Salesforce company — is data management tooling that may already be deployed independently in some portfolio companies.

BlackRock: No publicly disclosed operating relationship; standard index holdings of CRM only.

Others at Salesforce: Robin Washington (President, Chief Financial and Operating Officer)
