03 Competitive Landscape

Other vendors in this market: Databricks

Where it sits: Ramaswamy's thesis is worth quoting in substance because it is the clearest articulation of the data-layer argument: no AI model helps if there are four sources of enterprise truth, and there are at least three or four credible model providers, all of which Snowflake works with.

04 GIP & BlackRock Connections

GIP became a wholly-owned BlackRock subsidiary in October 2024 and now operates as BlackRock's dedicated infrastructure-investment arm. Stakes below are standard institutional/index-fund positions unless otherwise noted.

Entity	Possible connection
Global Infrastructure Partners	No publicly disclosed GIP relationship. Relevance sits in the Data Foundation and Workflows prerequisite — whether a PortCo has a governed single source of truth before any AI programme starts.
BlackRock	No publicly disclosed operating relationship; standard index holdings of SNOW only.

05 Sentiment

Customer: Net revenue retention of 125% and 740 net new customer additions, up 40%, point to both expansion and acquisition working at once — an unusual combination.

What supports the story

- Product revenue growth accelerated from 26% to 34% across five quarters, with the strongest sequential dollar growth in company history
- RPO up 42% to $9.77B and net revenue retention at 125% — both expansion and new-logo growth working
- Snowflake Intelligence hit 2,500 accounts in three months, the fastest ramp the company has recorded

What to pressure-test

- Consumption pricing makes revenue inherently more volatile than subscription models, in both directions
- Competing directly with Databricks, which is growing faster at over 80% and is larger by run rate
- Non-GAAP operating margin of only 10.5% in FY2026, expanding to a guided 12.5% — thin against subscription peers
