01 Who You're Meeting

Manny Maceda — Chair, Bain & Company.

In role: Chair since February 2025, succeeding Orit Gadiesh

Today: Chairs the firm following two terms as its chief executive, and continues to work closely with De Vusser on shaping Bain's direction.

Led Bain as Worldwide Managing Partner and CEO from 2018 until 30 June 2024, a period of accelerated expansion during which the firm roughly doubled in size and built out its digital capabilities substantially. He succeeded Orit Gadiesh as Chair in February 2025, taking a role she had held for three decades.

Career: Chair, Bain & Company; Worldwide Managing Partner & Chief Executive Officer, Bain & Company

The company: One of the three strategy firms, and the one with the deepest private equity franchise — which makes it the most likely of the MBB set to already be inside GIP's diligence workflows. It is also the least transparent: it stopped publishing revenue and uses at least two inconsistent headcount methodologies.

What they sell: Strategy, performance improvement and organisational consulting, with an unusually large private equity practice covering commercial due diligence, value creation planning and portfolio operations.

02 Where The Company Sits

Bain's PE practice is the relevant asset for an infrastructure fund — commercial due diligence and post-close value creation are its home ground, and it is likely already engaged somewhere in the deal pipeline. On AI specifically the public record is thin next to BCG, which disclosed 25% of revenue from AI work, and McKinsey, reported at around 40% from AI and technology advisory. Bain has published no comparable figure.

03 Talking Points

- A recent former CEO now chairing — influential but not the operating decision-maker; De Vusser is.
- He built the digital capability Bain now sells, so he is a credible reference on whether it is real.

What to pressure-test about the company:

- Discloses less than any peer in this set: no current revenue figure, and two inconsistent headcount methodologies
- Widely-cited figures are unreliable — the $14B on Wikipedia traces to a source that says $7.5B
- Headcount fell 5% in 2024 on a hiring freeze and elevated turnover, and 2025 barely recovered

04 GIP Context

GIP: No publicly disclosed GIP relationship. Given Bain's private equity franchise, check internally before assuming a clean slate — an existing commercial diligence relationship at deal level is plausible and would not be public.

BlackRock: None publicly disclosed.

Others at Bain & Company: Christophe De Vusser (Worldwide Managing Partner, CEO & Chairman of the Board); Orit Gadiesh (Chair Emeritus)
