01 Who You're Meeting

Janet Truncale — Global Chair & Chief Executive Officer, EY.

In role: Took the role on 1 July 2024, succeeding Carmine Di Sibio

Today: Leads roughly 400,000 people across more than 150 countries under the EY All in strategy, with the Client Zero model — applying AI to EY's own processes first — as her signature programme.

An intern-to-CEO career at a single firm, entirely on the assurance side. She joined EY as an intern in audit and held a series of roles in the Financial Services Organization, including Initial Public Offering Leader, Banking and Capital Markets Assurance Leader and Americas FSO Assurance Managing Partner, before becoming EY Vice Chair and Regional Managing Partner of the Americas Financial Services Organization, leading over 14,000 professionals across 90 offices.

Career: Global Chair & Chief Executive Officer, EY; Vice Chair & Regional Managing Partner, Americas Financial Services Organization, EY; Americas FSO Assurance Managing Partner, EY; Banking & Capital Markets Assurance Leader; Initial Public Offering Leader, EY

Education: BSE, The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania; MBA, Columbia University; Certified Public Accountant (New York)

The company: The third-largest Big Four network by revenue, and the one with the most distinctive AI operating model. Truncale, the first woman to lead a Big Four firm, runs a Client Zero approach — EY applies AI to its own processes first, then sells the learnings. AI-related revenue grew 30% in FY2025.

What they sell: Assurance, tax, consulting, strategy and transactions (through EY-Parthenon), legal and managed services, delivered by member firms. The AI programme runs under the EY All in strategy, with AI-powered solutions, industry alliances and AI governance frameworks as named service lines.

02 Where The Company Sits

Client Zero is a genuinely differentiated pitch and the numbers behind it are concrete: more than 100 AI applications deployed internally, over 50,000 AI agents in development, and more than 15,000 EY people working on AI-led client projects. The credible version of that claim is that EY can show a buyer what a deployment looked like inside a 400,000-person organisation before asking them to run one.

03 Talking Points

- Deep assurance and financial-services background, so board-level governance and audit-committee framing are her natural register.
- Client Zero gives her a first-person account of deploying AI across a 400,000-person firm — worth asking what actually failed, not just what worked.
- She sits on the New York Jobs CEO Council alongside Accenture's Julie Sweet, which is a live connection if you are dealing with both firms.

What to pressure-test about the company:

- Growth of 4.0% trails Deloitte's 4.8% and both trail Accenture's 7%
- Strategy and transactions was flat on revenue with headcount down 1.8% — the deal-linked business is not recovering
- Central structure has been under cost pressure since Project Everest collapsed in 2023; the global assessment has fallen below 3.5% of member firm revenue

04 GIP Context

GIP: No publicly disclosed GIP relationship. Note that EY US selected CrowdStrike's Falcon Next-Gen SIEM as the foundation for its global cybersecurity managed services — relevant if both vendors come up in the same conversation. As with Deloitte, check for an existing audit relationship at fund or PortCo level before scoping consulting work.

BlackRock: No publicly disclosed operating relationship.
